

You truly touched my heart when we met the other day on the sands with the crashing waves. You seemed so so strong and brave but it must hurt so much inside.

Cecile was and is in our hearts, an incredible person who gave so much of herself to others. She gave Ella the special gift I mentioned which has helped her so much. She helped me by introducing me to so many lovely families through the Ruka parties, and building strong connections for us all.

I wish I had a photo to share of the first time I met you in your Chiswick home. You had (and still do) so much energy and life and I could see the love Cecile had for you always in her smiling eyes. The second photo I would have loved to share is standing under a beautiful leafy and shady tree in Holland Park. We all seemed to be fussing around our children while you were running happy and free - Cecile seemed to be a true free spirit and she clearly wanted that for you too.

I can't begin to imagine what you are going through but think I can understand something of your pain through my own lived experience. I am sure you will find the support you need but know that I am always here for you too.

Love

Lucy
